Irish Bishops Ease Birth Control View

DUBLIN, April 5 (AP)— Roman Catholie bishops here have eased their bitter opposition to the sale of contraceptives, opening the door for the government to repeal an increasingly controversial birth-control ban. The bisbops said yesterday that, although the church remained convinced that contraception is morally wrong, the state is not bound to prohibit the distribution and sale of contraceptives.

The sale and distribution of birth control aids is banned in this overwhelmingly Catholic nation, although a 1974 Supreme Court ruling permits married couples to import contraceptives for their personal use. The bishops, in their state-ment, recognized that the present legal situation on contraceptives is unsatisfactory and that there may be a need for "some minimum amending legislation and that this would bring about a better situatioo than we bave now."

Limits Placed

The bishops stressed, bowever, that they will not tolerate the use of inter-uterine devices and some varieties of the pill. They said that such procedures might open the way to legal abortions.

Political sources said that the bisbops' statement will encourage Premier Jack Lyncb's Fianna Fail government to relax controls and permit the sale of contraceptives, at least to married couples, along with limited advertising. However,

'Even-Handed Policy'

"Through an even-handed policy, I think we can reach the moment when the talks [with Isra-el] can be resumed," Mr. Sadat added, The talks were suspended in January.

Mr. Carter and Mr. Begin elasbed over the terms of a settlement during the Israeli leader's visit to Washington last month.

Mr. Sadat reiterated yesterday tbat Mr. Carter's views are "ac-ceptable to me." His call for evenbandedness seemed to be an en-couragement to Mr. Carter to insist on his position.

The Boston Globe reported, meanwhile, that the Carter administration was preparing its declaration of principles governing a settlement.

Mr. Sadat declined to say when he thought a breakthrough might come in the dialogue with Israel. Egyptian sources said, however, that there could be renewed momentum toward a settlement by

May.
When asked to comment oo reports that Mr. Begin is personally considered responsible for the current deadlock, Mr. Sadat replied, "Well, I don't want to intefere in others' domestic prob-lems. By Murrey Marder

WASHINGTON, April 5 (WP)—Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will make at least ooe, possibly two, trips to Africa this Moscow for a major round of nuclear arms cootrol negotiations, officials said yesterday.

That unusually crowded schedule for Mr. Vance emerges from President Carter's decision on his African trip to join Britain in a new attempt to bridge the angry division between black nationalists over a Rhodesian peace set-

There is also a connection between the ferment in Africa and the impending negotiations in Moscow on the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT). In Moscow, Mr. Vance will be discussing African issues, in addition to strategic arms control.

The U.S., Britain and many African nations fear that a failure to resolve the Rhodesian conflict can lead to a black-on-black civil war between Rhodesian nationalists. That could bring Soviet and Cuban military personnel now in Africa into the Rhodesian bostili-

Critics of the neutron bomb argue that the very "cleanness" of this nuclear warhead is dangerous because it increases the tempta-tinn to use it and so escalate a conventional conflict into a nuclear one. Already, two NATO members,the Netherlands and Norway, have come out against the neutron warhead.

After considerable soul-searching, Britain, West Germany and probably Belgium are reported by officials here to have privately made up their minds in the last few weeks that they want the United States to agree to manufacture the new weapon and then try to bargain it away against Soviet arms concessinns.

In particular, West European governments are concerned about the Warsaw Pact countries' three-to-one advantage over NATO in tanks and by deployment of the Soviet Umon's new SS-20 mobile, multiheaded nuclear missile which is targeted nn Europe rather than the United States. "We saw it as an important test," said a UN officer. "We fired back with small arms and machine guns. It showed them that they could fire over our beads all they want, but if they shoot at us, we'll shoot back."

About 100 Lebanese internal security men arrived in Tyre today as the central government worked to re-establish its authority in the embattled south for the first time in two years.

The Lebanese forces joined the French UN troops at checkpoints around Tyre and a group took up its position at the Kakia bridge over the strategic Litani River in the central sector, the Lebanese sources said

But the positions seemed to be more lightly manned than before: Israeli tankers and artillerymen relaxed or worked to make their positions more comfortable. And in the towns, Israeli carpenters were helping Lebanese repair the-lighter damage, while heavy-trucks from Israel hauled away the smashed stane and concrete

Mideast Arms Package To Get Congress Delay

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—The Carter administration has decided to delay suhmission of its controversial $4.8-billion Middle East arms package tn Congress until the Senate takes final action on the Panama Canal treaties in about three weeks.

The move, disclosed today, would give opponents of the Mideast arms deals more time to try to block warplane sales to Saudi Arahia and Egypt. But it might also help the administration in the long run.

The delay reflects consideration for senators who have not yet made up their minds on the arms package and want the canal treaties settled first before turning their attention to the question of Mideast arms.

Once the arms package is formally submitted, Cangress has 30 days to exercise a veto. Unless a majority of both the House and Senate register their opposition within that time, the deals automatically go through.

Criticism has centered mostly on the proposed sale of 60 F-15 jet fighter-bombers to Saudi Arabia. Backers of Israel are concerned that the planes would be used against the Jewish state in a future Mideast war. Other opponents base their objections on the proliferation of sophisticated weapons in an unstable region.

There also is oppositing to the administration's plan to sell 50 F-DE fighters to Egypt, the first major arms shipment to that country by the United States. The pack-Afterward, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is prepared to testify before Senate and House committees, on request. In light of the arms controversy, such a request to testify appears inevitable.

In an earlier round of hearings. Mr. Vance politely turned down requests for delay, saying that the Middle East countries were eager to have the sales completed.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a key member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had urged the administration to give Congress more time. He said that the Senate would be preoccupied with the Panama Canal treaties and he hoped that Congress would not have to "rusb to

10 Years After Assassination

Memphis Remembers King's Dream

By Jerry Gray

MEMPHIS, April 5 (AP)— Streets that were filled with cries of anguish 10 years ago when Martin Luther King jr. was mur-dered here, were filled with a calm assemblage as Memphis remembered.

From the balcony of the Lor-raine Motel, a hlack minister cried out to the people yesterday, and for a moment he resembled another black minister killed there on April 4, 1968. "Somebody said Dr. King bad a dream, I doo't think he had a dream," said Charles Buford, 35, who heads a nooprofit group's effort to huy the Lorraine and turn it into a national monument to

"The Bible tells me that old men shall dream and a young man shall dream visions.

"The dictionary tells me dream is a myth and you can't tell me you're living in a myth now. You're oot living in a dream now, you're living in reality."

2,000 Gather

More than 2,000 gathered to remember Dr. King. The stop at the Lorraine was the mid-point in the mile-long march.

From Clayborn Temple AME Church, where Dr. King spoke and led striking sanitation workers on a march a week before be was shot, the crowd walked through the crumbling oeighborhood to the Lorraine. There the crowd overflowed the motel's courtyard and spilled ooto the narrow and littered streets.

Across the street, a figure peered from behind the closed window of a deserted flophouse. It was from that window that the fatal shot allegedly was fired. A group of civil right leaders gathered at the Orpbeum Theater. One speaker was Jerry Wurf, international president of the American Federation of State, County and Muncipal Employ-

"The purpose of the march is to never let us forget what King meant, oot just to Memphis but for the struggle for freedom throughout this nation," Mr. Wurf said. "I think in 10 years some of that pain is a little dull, but the sharpoess and the cootributioo of King is very much

A march in Gadsden, Ala., also commemorated Dr. King's death, but organizers used it to dramatize what they said was an example of racial injustice.

Marchers there protested the Jan. 20 fatal sbooting of a 27-year-old hlack man by white po-lice officers after he crashed through a police roadblock during a high-speed chase. Local hlack leaders said that the man was unarmed and was shot without provocation.

House Defeats Carter Bid To Enlarge Personal Staff

WASHINGTON April 5 (WP)—A White House-backed bill authorizing the President to oearly double the size of his top persooal staff was defeated in the House yesterday. Republicans said that the bill

They also accused the White House of bringing the bill up under a procedure that prevented amendments, in order to protect the size of the staff increase.

He said that that the bill was merely an the hill should be viewed not as authorization, and not what was an increase in the White House staff hut as an attempt to put a oumerical ceiling on top staff levels, something that has oot been done before.

The bill would increase from 55 to 100 the oumber of positions oo the President's personal staff at the supergrade level (GS16 and above, earning from $42,500 to $57,500). It would also authorize hiring unlimited employees at the GS16 level, unlimited consultants, and staff for the wives of the President and Vice-President.

"The White House wanted a general authorizatioo with no number," Rep. Harris said. "They thought a specific requiremeot was being put on them that bad never been put on anyone

New Accounting

Rep. Harris also contended that the White House would, for the first time, have to account for the employees that it "borrows" from other government agencies and report to Congress on their oumber and cost as well as oo those hired as consultants.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the bill could result in a more than 30-per-cent increase in the cost of White House staff - from $29.5 million to $38.1 millioo in fiscal 1979, if all the positions were filled.

But White House spokesmen would be filled. They claimed that the staff has been trimmed since Mr. Carter took office, from really being asked for. According to Patricia Bario, White House press aide, the White House is asking for only $16.9 million for the year.

State Department officials testifying at a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing, said that about 10 per cent of an esti-mated 2,000 Libyan students in the United are enrolled in nuclear related courses.

Howard Hjort, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, said after the conferees adopted a Republican-spoosored proposal that would raise price and income support levels for wheat, corn and cotton for farmers in proportion to the amount of land they agreed to take out of production.

Mr. Hjort said that he could not put a price tag on the one-year bill because some changes were made by the conferees. But he said that it would be generally congruent to the Senate-passed version, which the congressional budget office said would add 2 per cent to retail food costs and the administraton said would cost nearly $3 billion more than the SOWETO, South Africa, April 5—The scar of a panga knife crosses the cheek of Emdeni Mdalozi, a 25-year-old migrant worker from Zululand and a casualty of the tribal warfare in South Africa's black ghettos.

Last year in Soweto, an allblack city of more than a million residents outside Johannesburg, there was an average of two homicides a day. On weekends as many as 12 bodies have been found in the unpaved alleys between the rows of drab box-like houses that make Soweto probably the largest low-cost housing project in the world.

Not all of these killings were due to tribal feuding. Other elements of violence are present too - frustration, drunkenness and lust. But police say the influx of large numbers of workers from different tribes to work in the

East and Middle East

The visit of Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to Bucbarest has a particular importance at this time of apparent stalemate in the Middle East. For, conceivably, Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu might serve a mediator's role between Israel and the Arabs. Indeed, it is not wholly impossible that he might serve as mediator between Eastern Europe and the Middle East.

For a long time, the Middle Eastern problem has apparently posed Israel and the United States on one side; the Soviet Union and the Arabs on the other. And the United States has been urged to consider this region as one of the principal battlegrounds of the continuing cold war-and one that could heat that war up considerably.

But it should not be forgotten that when Israel was formed, Moscow and Washington raced to see which would be first to recognize the new government. And most of Israel's arms at that time came from Eastern Europe.

Too much stress should not be laid on this, of course. After all, Britain and France fought with Israel during the Suez crisis, 22 years ago. But they have both drifted away if not as far as the Soviet Union-when radical governments cropped up in the Arab states and Stalin's anti-Semitism grew. Moscow, however, has never publicly abandoned the concept of an Israeli state with assured (if not secure) boundaries. In this it has been at odds with the more intransigent Arab groups, and in accepting President Carter's effort to bring about a general conference with the United States and the Soviet Union as co-chairmen, the Soviet Union was not as unprecedented (nor Mr. Carter as naive) as many believed at the time.

And Romania has been as maverick in its relations with Israel as it has been in its relations with the Soviet Union. So if there is any impulse in Moscow to bring about an end to Middle Eastern hostilities, Mr. Ceausescu might well be the one person who could encourage that sentiment. And if—as the United States bas been urging concessions on Israel-the Soviet Union were to do the same with its Arab allies, the grim deadlock might

In other words, Romania might be a constructive catalyst for Eastern Europe-provided Moscow does desire a reasonable settlement in the Middle East and is not primarily interested in maintaining a state of chaos there, from which it might profit, as it is trying to do from the troubles in the Horn of Africa. This opportunity, if both Bucharest and Moscow are inclined to seize it, is a major challenge to contribute to a genuinely global detente, comparable to the challenge of arms control. In the light of current events, one cannot be optimistic-but in the light of the past, and the repeated policy assertions of the Soviet Union, mere pessimism is also ruled out.

Telling the World

There is a kind of nice political clunk to the creation of a new agency, the International Communication Agency, to manage the newly twinned tasks of telling the world about the United States and telling the United States about the world. The idea of better organizing the bureaucracy to educate Americans and others in interdependence-by putting the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department's cultural and educational functions into one redesigned home-had been kicking around for some years. Jimmy Carter picked it up. The idea fit his confidence, and a certain post-Vietnam renewal of confidence among many other Americans, in the American system. It fit, too, his inclination to respect the people and cultures of foreign countries, if not always their governments. Over the weekend, the reorganization was finally accomplished.

Whether the purpose survives the process is far from insured. Such organizations, besides making outsiders shrug, can make insiders hunker down to block real change. Much will depend on the leadership offered by the director, John E. Reinhardt, a senior diplomat (and former USIA director) with a quiet but determined belief in the new agency's realm of "public diplomacy." He defines that amorphous activity, often put down by traditional diplomats, as the devising of "ways of broadening human possibilities that none of us could devise behind our national frontiers, or through formal negotiations."

The new agency has its own staff for broadcasting (Voice of America), information, cultural exchange, the gauging of foreign opinion and general policy advice. We intend no disrespect to the ICA's own people, however, when we point out that its most valuable resource is the participation of everincreasing numbers of private U.S. citizens and institutions in hundreds of different international programs that it manages, at bome and abroad. Those participants weave and unending tapestry—perhaps "quilt" is a better American word—of information and ideas that serve not just U.S. foreign policy bu the whole quality of U.S. life. Few things are more important to U.S. interest, broadly conceived, than telling the world about ourselves—and listening.

International Opinion

Court of Common Presumption

The so-called Russell Tribunal recently held in Frankfurt was a grotesque spectacle. It would be a waste of time of discuss the credentials of this self-appointed body or its right to sit in judgment of others. It would be equally fruitless to expect common sense from people who only see the faults of others and are blind to those of the so-called progressive ideologies of the world. But though it might seem best to ignore the whole thing, there comes a point when striving after utopia begins to achieve very unutopian practieal effects, the extreme left in West Germany and elsewhere passed that point long ago and has discredited itself as a result. And now, along comes the Russel tribunal and makes propaganda for those seeking new means to undermine democracy in West Germany.

From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

The Russell Tribunal in Frankfurt was right to condemn the statute under which West Germans suspected of extremist views or of disloyalty to the Constitution can be barred from employment by all public authorities - from the German Federal Railways to the Foreign Office or the local sanitation department. The Russell Trihunal, givcn its antecedents and composition, can hardly be regarded in these matters as a source of disapassionate and impartial judg-

In the first place, the authorities—in most cases the West German Intelligence Service, or Verlassungsschutz-never seem to have been called upon to prove in an open hearing that a particular person was subversive so that the person in question had no chance to defend himself. In the second place, the West German authorities refused to testify about their methods or the reasons behind them.

It remains true that the West German government has a real problem when it comes to spies. No other country except Korea is divided and armed against itself...At the end of the day, however, the West German authori-ties, which means the state authorities as well only moderately, he is alert, his as the federal ones, must take serious stock of what the Berufsverbot is doing to the principles that they themselves profess...The West German authorities ought not to treat deed the lapse of time, sharpening extremist garbage men as the Poles treat disextremist garbage men as the Poles treat dissident professors.

-From the Guardian (London). U.S. Deal With Turkey

In asking Congress to lift its restrictions on arms sales to Turkey, President Carter is taking a calculated risk. The restrictions (originally in the form of a total embargo) were imposed as a response to the Turkish inva-sion of Cyprus in 1974, in which U.S. weapons were used. Congress took the view that, in using U.S. weapons to invade a friendly country, the Turkish government had broken U.S. law...

What is behind this timing? Probably the and too conservative as well, to fear, cleverly cultivated by Mr. Ecevit himself through a series of press leaks, that U.S. foot-dragging on the Defense Cooperation Agreement might actually be the cause of delay over Cyprus proposals and might even result in those proposals eventually emerging less positive than had been hoped...It can hardly have been a coincidence that Tuesday, after the State Department's announcement, Mr. Ecevit came out with a conciliatory statement on Cyprus promising not only changes in the dividing line between the present Greek and Turkish zones, but also gradual progress towards full freedom of movement and of settlement across the line... nd of settlement across the line... democracy among the major.

The omens (on the Cyprus issue) are relaWestern countries. Most importtively hopeful. But if reasonable proposals do ant he began the process of not emerge very quickly the disappointment detents. Brandt is now well launched on his role as elder statesman of the West. Not the least impressive was his role in Portugal two-anda-half years ago when a Communist take-over seemed imminent. Carter Acts to Cure Foreign Policy Ills

There is a keener edge to his public statements now, a sense of hurry, of eagerness to confront the complicated and intractable problems of world affairs, to cut through the confusions and dominate the news by being more "decisive" and more "presiden-

His differences with Prime Minister Begin of Israel did not start the changes but they do dramatize it. The President had tried to philosophize and per-suade Begin in their previous meeting here that only by funda-mental concessions by Israel could a "comprehensive settlement" be reached in the Middle East. This opproach failed.

In his second Washington meeting with Begin, he did not try to evade their differences but confronted them, and he has been following this line ever since, regardless of the opposition on Capitol Hill or in the world capi-

Name any flammable foreign policy issue, and Carter has taken it on: Panama, Rhodesia, South at on; Panama, Raodesia, South Africa, Japanese steel, automobiles, television sets, and all other trade problems. And he has intervened, regardless of the powerful political and commercial lobbies that have opposed him, in domestic controversies as well.

He is in trouble now with al-most every powerful lobby in Washington: Big Labor, Big Busi-ness, Jews, blacks, liberal intellectuals and farmers in short, all the powerful constituencies whose opposition he doesn't need if he is to be re-elected in 1980.

Yet he goes on, even adding the opposition of the powerful Pentagon forces that wanted the B-1 bomber and the neutron missile, and nobody should assume that he does all this by accident or inexperience.

The background of all this is very interesting. After his first year in office, and his State of the Union message in January, even his closest advisers felt that he was getting into trouble. Mainly because he seemed to be indecisive-proclaiming bold policies and then retreating wheo opposed.

This perception of the Presi-dent's stewardship was shared not only on Capitol Hill, but within the Western alliance and even within his Cabinet. Now, he seems to be responding to the advice that he must define his positions more clearly, even if the Congress does not agree.

I have the impression that there has been a bit of a struggle between his policy advisers and his political advisers: the first arguing that he should coocentrate on fighting for what he thinks is right, and the second urging him to be careful and work for a sec-

Moscow, loaded with position papers on proposals on a whole range of East-West issues which were given to him by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the Kremlin detailed reply to Carter in Pravda was held up for 11 days while Dobrynin was working hard to per-suade the Kremlin leadership that its first response was unnecessarily pugnacious. When the Pravda reply to Carter did appear under the name of Georgi Arbatov, the Kremlin's expert on the United States who usually takes the dovish line in Soviet foreign policy disputes, it seemed addressed as much to Soviet hawks as to Washington.

A Clue

One clue to the Kremlin debate is to be found in a Moscow television program which replied last month to letters from viewers who had challenged by implica-tion Leonid Brezhnev's policy of parient negotiations with the United States. "The talks with the United States have continued for a long time with no results," said one letter. "Talks cannot produce peace," said another. The facts of international life, it argued had shown in recent years "that it is impossible to achieve a stable peace through political talks or diplomatic maneuvers." The television commentator who quoted these letters from viewers replied by citing the benefits of detente by praising Brezhnev's contribution to it.

Past experience suggests that when an implied challenge and re-sponse of this kind is allowed to come out in the open in Moscow, a far more explicit debate on the Se issue is usually proceeding behind

WASHINGTON—The signs the closed doors of the Kremlin. from the Kremlin suggest But other clues are necessary to Sometimes such elues are provided by Soviet press articles on precisely what Pravda did the day after the letters critical of Brezhnev's policy were quoted on Moscow television. The article was ostensibly concerned with the seventh Party Congress in 1918 which witnessed a struggle between Lenin, who was prepared to make far-reaching concessions to secure peace with Germany But when Dohrynin returned to and his opponents, who wanted to continue the war.

The Soviet leadership struggle of that time over the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty has provided the code terms for a number of appeared to be having second subsequent Kremlin debates be-thoughts. The more considered, tween those who wanted to make tween those who wanted to make concessions in order to reach a compromise with the West, and those who wanted to follow a hard line. The seventh party congress supported Lenin's policy of compromise and defeated his opponents. Pravda's recollection of this struggle now means that Brezhnev is appealing for support of his own policy compromise, and for the defeat of his opponents. Skepnics might argue that to say this is to read too much into a purely historical article. But they would have to contend with Pravda's own reminder that the seventh party congress decisions make them will depend on the "serve as an example" of the concessions which Vance takes party's taerics in the conduct of

John Hay Whitney

But is this, perhaps, only a general statement of principle, rather than a specific reference to the present. Pravda insists that "today,too," the party solves the tactical problems of foreign policy hy "strictly" following Lenin's instructions on combining its devotion to Communism "with the ability to make practical compromises." Iodeed, it cites So-viet agreements with the West on such things as arms control as an example of this policy—which means that it is defending Brezhnev against charges that he is making too many concessions in these agreements.

The Soviet hawks had been stressing Washington's unremitting hostility to the Soviet Union. Arbatov, on the other hand, argued that the political situation in the United States "is complex. not simple," and pointed to the U.S. doves who favored a compromise. The Soviet hawks had been stressing the rising opposinon to detente in the United States, hut Arbatov argued that "this is only one side of the picture." He told them that "one must not overlook the fact" that it is in the U.S. national interest too to prevent war and divert money from the arms race.

Arbatov's article was certainly an appeal to Washington to make the concessions necessary for an agreement. But it was also an appeal to Soviet hawks to allow Brezhnev to make his own concessions to this end. The extent to which Brezhnev is allowed to with him to Moscow when he goes there later this month.

U.S. Decision to Sell Tin Sparks Outcry in Bolivia

By John M. Goshko

WASHINGTON. April 5 bill makes good sense domesucaling Bolivia $36 million in foreign aid this fiscal year, a sum intended in part to belp that country return to civilian rule after a decade of military dictatorship.

Yet, three weeks ago, the Carter administration announced a step that could cost Bolivia as much as $60 million this year - a loss that the government of President Hugo Banzer says could seriously disrupt its economy and fragile political situation.

That was not what President Carter intended when he gave his support March 9 to a plan for the U.S. government to buy $250 miltion worth of copper. The purchase would be financed by selling 50,000 tons of government-owned tin. From Mr. Carter's point of view, that seemed like a savvy political thing to do.

But it evoked cries of economic aggression in places like Malaysia and Bolivia that live off their un exports. Outside the U.S. embassy in La Paz, it triggered a demonstration that was led by Juan Pereda Asbun, regarded as the front-running candidate for the Bolivian presidency.

These reactions illustrate the collisions that confront the Carter administration whenever it has to deal with raw materials. prices and supplies..

U.S. Pressures

On one side are the pressures exerted by U.S. business, labor and consumers. On the other and usually counter to these domestic interests — is an administration promise to help the materials-producing countries of the Third World in their struggle against underdevelopment and

> Controversy Abroad But, the plan has generated controversy abroad because it calls for financing part of the copper purchase by selling what will amount to 50,000 tons of tin from the U.S. stockpile.

The outery has been particularly strong in Bolivia, whose population of 5.6 million has an annual per capita income of $360 --the second-lowest in Latio America - and whose tin exports are virtually its sole source of foreign earnings. President Banzer sent a letter to Mr. Carter expressing concern. Representatives of the state-controlled mining industry, led by the minister of mines. Ernesto Camacho Hurtado, issued a communique calling the U.S. action economic aggression and an attempt to create "conflict among countries which produce and depend on raw materials."

Underscoring the Bolivian concern is the recent performance of the world tin market. The world price has fallen from just under $6 a pound to around $4.75 io anticiaption of the depressing effect on the market of the U.S. deci-

For Bolivia, which exports about 30,000 tons of tin a year, that could mean losses next year of up to $60 million, even if the price does not drop further. That sum is almost double the U.S. aid contribution of $36 million.

Lower Price Expected

President Banzer and other Bolivian officials have charged that the price almost certainly will fall much lower, drastically eroding ings. It already pays 30 per cent of its export earnings to service a foreign debt of close to $2 billion.

FASHION IN ITALY -

Fur Transformed by the Magic of Ideas

Hebe Dorsey

MILAN, April 5 (IHT)—Italian designers have turned fur into high fashioo. The price is irrelevant and an nrdioary mink coat is dull.

The Italians' technique, backed hy imaginative, freewheeling tal-ent makes them world leaders. And for the first time the designers have devoted a large part of their collections to furs treated with the same fashioo sense and seemiogly careless hand.

The first to put Italian furs oo the map was Paris-hased Karl Lagerfeld, who started working with the Fendi sisters 12 years ago. The combination of their skill and Lagerfeld's unhampered flow of ideas has been magic. It has also been fruitful, both for Fendi and for other Italian furriers, who followed their lead.

Lagerfeld iotroduced a lot of attractive but fairly unexpensive Noah's Ark. Io ooe garment, he furs, such as squirrel and mole, might have as many as 20 furs,

Patchwork Idea

Another striking idea was a patchwork of any oumber of dif-ferent furs, which he called his

He also replaced spotted furs This time, Lagerfeld literally from endangered species with slashed furs with a razor in a painted mink, each spot painted manner reminiscent of paper one by one with a brush so adroitly that one can hardly tell the difference

Fendi's colors are also unusually suhtle. There is e khaki and a purple that are firsts in Fendi's collection, which introduced such rare colors as bois de rose and flat furs, including squirrel and a Bordeaux. "It's my first try with wonderful ivory chinchilla and alpurple," Lagerfeld said, "and I'm rather pleased. I didn't know what to expect really. But mink and especially lynx turned out a soft mauve whereas mole and marten, which are darker to start with, came out a strong purple."

The main line at Fendi's was broad-shouldered, an effect emphasized by short, removable capes that looked like breastplates. These capes, when worn by themselves, doubled as evening wraps. Capes and ponchos layers of mink, their hems finished with the animal's feet which swing like a fringe.

Wolf's 'Corregidor' Finally Gets to Italy

By William Weaver

TURIN, April 5 (IHT)—The season at the Teatro Regio here opens in late November and lasts almost until June, with an average of three performances a week. But the actual oumher of operas presented is small: seven, this year, plus a ballet evening. Despite this limited choice, the variety is remarkable, even daring. The current season, for example, opened with Verdi's "Macbeth" and will close with Rossini's "Barber of Seville." It also includes e "Tosca," but the other works are far from conventional.

Henze's "Elegy for Young Lovers," for example, was given its first performance in Italian, and the work now to be seen in the handsome Turin house is Hugo Wolf's sole opera, "Der Corregidor," which has never been staged in Italy before, though its first performance—in Mannheim—dates hack to 1897.

Immense Interest

This is not a repertory opera even in the German-language houses, but it really should have reached Italy before now. Needless to say, it is a work of immense interest. Its quality, however, is clusive, even cootradictory. Though the original story—Alareon's "Three-Coroered Hat"—is comic, and though the opera has some standard huffo characters (including e sneezing servant), the hasic tone is wistful.

Libretto Translated

The Teatro Regio made the questionable decisioo of giving the opera in Italian translation, when the ! bretto is so clear that it would be hard not to follow the tale in the original. The distinguished Italian musicologist Luigi Rognoni made the translation, and it is, frankly, pedestrian.

unable to capture and coovey the clusive quality. The comedy and the humanity never fused. One felt that the staging—and some of the singers-were trying to turn Wolf into Rossini: a doomed

Tullio Pane, in the difficult role of the amorous governor, the Corregidor of the title, did a creditable job, though he-like some of the other singers-kept his eyes firmly on the conductor most of the time. The Rossinian comics included the veterans Paolo Montarsolo and Renato Erco-

The delicacy of much of the orchestration, the subtle shifts of tempo, the haunting beauty of the tunes-all this emerged, even though Piero Bellugi's conducting was generally uninspired. Having gone to such trouble to present an unfamiliar and significant work, the Regio should have entrusted it to more sensitive hands.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Wheeling Seeks Capital From Staff

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel says it lost about $13.8 million during the first two months of 1978, a little more than half the total amount it lost last year. The ninth-ranked U.S. producer blames weather and the 110-day coal strike for the set-back. The amount was disclosed in a prospectus for a proposed new issue of preferred stock that the company hopes to sell to its 15,000 employees as a means of building equity capital. The company bopes to sell up to 450,000 shares of a new Series-A preferred stock with a par value of $25 a share and accruing a 10 percent annual dividend. However, it is unlikely that a dividend will be paid soon as the company is in arrears of $2.3 million on its two classes of preferred stock and "doesn't expectthat it will be able to reinstate dividends in the near future." Wheeling reported a loss of $25.6 million on sales of $966 million in 1977, compared with a $3.2-million profit in 1976.

Hitachi Sees Flat Profits, Sales

Hitachi estimates net profit and sales in the fis-cal year ended March 31 were level with the previous year. Senior managing director Akitomo Yoshikawa says the outlook for Japan's economy is getting more chaone as a result of the unexpect-edly rapid pace of the yen's appreciation and the prolonged sluggishness of capital spending. Talk of possible moves to restrict Japan's strong ex-ports is also unsettling, be adds. Hitachi was able to produce about the same after-tax profit in the latest year (the parent company earned 30.36 bil-lion yen a year earlier) due to streamlining and oew technological developments. But he says that domestic demand for electronic products such as color television sets remains inactive. Hitachi expects to be able to post some increase in oet profit in the fiscal year just started. Mr. Yoshikawa pre-dicts that overall exports this year will remain flat at about 360 billion yen, accounting for about 25 percent of overall sales—the prevailing level for the past two years.

Olivetti Eyes Capital Increase

Olivetti, Italy's largest office machines and com-puters group, is considering an increase of its registered capital. The size of the operation was not given by the company, but reliable sources say the increase would be at least 40 billion lire (about 547 million), raising the total capital to 100 billioo dire. Olivetti last increased its capital 14 years ago to 60 billion lire from 44 billion. A company spokesman says the operation is being considered because the company is undercapitalized in comparision with total 1977 consolidated group sales estimated at more than 1.3 trillion lire. The official says that a oeed for cash to meet mounting short-term debts, estimated at 90 billion lire, was not part of the reason to increase capital.

IBM Lifts Veil of Secrecy on Sales

International Business Machines, which usually provides little information about the actual revenue from its principal line of business—computer sales and rentals—apparently has decided to change its policy. In its latest report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission is a table that for the first time discloses, although indirectly, the revenue from computer business for the last five years. The data indicates that sales have been running higher and rentals lower than a oumber of analysts had thought. Its backlog of computer orders is also higher than some analysts had expected. Data-processing products and ser-vices have accounted for a declining share of revenue, dropping to 81 percent of last year's total from 84 percent in 1973. Over the same period, revenue from sold machines has risen 144 percent to an indicated $4.6 billion last year, while rental revenue has grown only 30 percent, reaching an indicated $8.2 billion in 1977.

The 1980 Winter Olympics now have an Official Bank.

It's the Irving Trust Company and the designation is altogether appropriate: a worldwide bank for a worldwide event.

It's an honor we're not taking lightly. Plans are already underway to set up three separate banking facilities in the Olympic areas for the convenience of the athletes, the media and the visitors at this grand spectacle. Each will provide the same high standard of service that has long been an Irving hallmark. ber, too.

When the Olympic parties arrive in Lake Placid, we'll be waiting to serve them. When the games are over and the visitors head for far-flung homelands, we want them to remember us.

And to remember, also, that Irving is prepared to serve all their banking needs worldwide.

That's something for you to remem-

KALKI By Gore Vidal, Random House, 254pp. $10. Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

To be in my shoes or seven-league boots last year, you would have to have been Theodora Hecht Ottinger, known as Teddy, aged 34, test pilot, na-tive of San Diego, graduate of the University of Southern California [degree io engioeering], winner of the International Harmon Trophy, breaker of records and men's self-esteem [if you happened to have talked to an envious male colleague) and author with...Her-man V. Weise, hack...of the best-seller 'Beyond Motherhood' [lousy title], a candid look at my life and hard times as a flier, woman, mother and would-be know-it all." So begins the narra-tor of Gore Vidal's 16th and lat-est novel, "Kalki," as she sits several years from now "at the big table in the Cabinet Room of the White House" and tries to write her version of what happened. What happened is somewhat complicated. In a coconut shell: Teddy, out of work, broke, and behiod on her alimony payments, was asked by an old editor friend to get the scoop on an ex-G.I. named James J. Kelly, who had shown up io Katmandu. Nepal. and was claiming to be nothing less than Kalki, the last reiocarnation of the Hindu God, Lord Vishnu, here to preside over the end of the Iron Age — or age of Kali — to which we were now living, and to usher in, along with those few who measured up. a new and golden age wherein a better race of meo would populate the earth. The reason that Teddy had drawn the assignment was simply that Kelly-Kalki had personally asked for her.

So Teddy flew to Nepal, met with Kelly, and, was soon convioced that, at the very least, he himself believed that he was Kalki. The upshot was that she signed a contract to be his personal pilot. The upshot of this was that she joined a three-ring circus that had the cotire world wondering whether Kalki was simply the front for an international drug ring, or whether indeed the world would end April 3, as Kalki has predicted. And the upshot of this was that at noon on April 3, Kalki appeared on a barge off Manhattan, and in his role as Siva, the destroyer, began to dance the dance that would bring our age to an end, And: "As Siva twisted and turned, leapt and whirled, the age of Kali [did come] to its pre-dicted end."

Just exactly how it came to its end and what happened after that, I won't say, because a good deal of the compulsion to keep turning the pages of "Kalki" lies in wanting to learn what amusing little apocalypse Vidal has in store for a world he has never been overly fond of. Suffice it to say that he has not made the plot of "Kalki" as complicated as it is simply to dazzle us and make plausible a highly improbable ending. It may seem at times as if he is doing so — as if, for instance, he has created in Teddy Ottinger a character whose only purpose is to justify the novel's tricky denouement. But Teddy's cynical and erogenous voice also happens to provide just the right tone of bitchy sorrow that we would expect from Vidal himself were he ever io a positioo to describe the actual passing of civilization as he has known and loathed it. What is more, the world as it appears in "Kalki" probably deserves to be wiped out. At least we can be sure that Vidal thinks so. Both Russia and the United-States are looking for an excuse to try out on each other a new variation of the neutron bomb that will radioactivate the earth for 1,000 years. "Because of a recent oil spill, the waters of [New York] bay [are] a thick gumbo in which dead birds float alongside of dead fish." The air is contaminated; the politicians are corrupt; overpopulation abounds; some people are opposed to abortion and New York City's police and sanitation workers are on strike "for added dignity."

So Vidal has himself a grand old time in the persona of Teddy Hecht Ottinger oo her way to the apocalypse, tossing out opinions on everything from the hideousness of international hotel decoor prescribed by St.Conrad," to the failure of the "typical woman's book of the seventies, a period when Jewish princesses became queens of popular fiction just as the Jewish princes had reigned as kings the decade before."

And a good time is had by a few eveo after the apocalypse when Kalki and his intrepid hand of Perfect Masters indulge everybody's after-the-end-of-civilization fantasies by lifting their favorite art treasures from the Louvre and the Jeu de Paume, and moving to a suite in the St. Regis, because it's closer to Elizabeth Arden and Saks Fifth Avenue, and "within shooting dis-tance of what's left of the old Abercrombic & Fitch. The reader has a good time too.

up to a point. But an icy wind blows throughout the novel, and when all is said and done, that wind has blasted the characters and plot of "Kalki" into just so many opinions. These opinions hold that civilization is noxious and that whatever contributes to its protraction, like marriage and procreation, is noxious as well. These are Gore Vidal's opinions. He has told us them before. The fiction he has made of them in "Kalki" is not firm enough to contain them. By the end, it does not seem like fiction that we are reading, but just another clever dissertation by Gore Vidal

Polugaevsky Wins

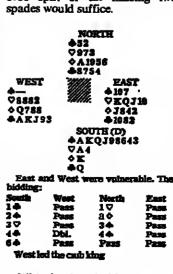

LONE PINE, Calif. April 5 (AP)—A victory over Yugoslav grandmaster Rajko Bogdanovic left Lev Polugaevsky the only un-beaten player after three rounds in the Louis D. Statham International Chess Tournament in this resort north of Los Angeles. Polu-gaevsky earlier had defeated Edward Formanek of Chicago, in the opening round, and another Yugoslav, Dragoljub Janosevic.

By Saturday, all 26 teams will be in action.

With advance ticket sales up for 25 clubs-all except Oakland-there is a chance that baseball could exceed the record attendance of 38,709,781 set last season. That represented an increase of 24 percent and a jump of more than 7 million over the previous record set in 1976.

A Matter of Time

As for business on the field rather than in the stands, it won't take some teams long to find out spring didn't make them instant pennant contenders. Other teams vill have to play a bit longer before discovering that they, too, are only pretender contenders.

That leaves the legitimate contenders: New York, Boston and perhaps Baltimore in the American League East; Kansas City, Texas and California in the West; Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in the National League East and Los Angeles and Cincinnati in the

Some teams are emerging from spring training in the same shape they entered it, except in better physical condition. Some, however scrutinized the personnel they had for the championship run and concluded they needed more.

Cincinnati and Pittsburgh obtained much-needed relief pitch-ing, the Reds acquiring Dave Tomlin from Texas and Doug Bair from Oakland and the Pirates getting Will McEnancy from Montreal and Jim Bibby, who was declared free of Cleveland.

Bibby's sudden free-agency was part of a series of events that indicated this season would be no less zany than last. The day after Bibwas freed because the Indians had failed to pay him a $10,000 bonus on time, the Indians rewarded Phil Seghi, the general manager who had arranged the bonus deal, with an additional three years on his contract.

At least four front-line pitchers will open the season on the disahled list: Andy Messersmith (Yankees) suffered a shoulder separation after making remarkable progress from elbow surgery; Luis Tiant (Boston) suffered a dislocated index finger on his pitching hand; Bill Travers Milwaukee) still is recuperating from elbow surgery, and Fernan-do Arroyo (Detroit) is recovering from knee surgery. Arroyo didn't have his opera-tion until Feb. 1, even though he injured his knee in November while pitching in Mexico. It seems the young pitcher didn't want anything to interfere with his scheduled marriage and honeymoon so he apparently told the Tigers about his injury well after Maria Felix became Mrs. Arroyo. The Tigers, on the other hand, learned relatively quickly this spring that their dynamic pitching duo, Mark Fidrych and Dave Rozema, had put their tendinitis problems behind them. Meanwhile, a former Tiger, Mickey Lolich, discovered he could still pitch after a one-year retirement and will begin the season in the San Diego Padre bull pen.

There's an animal kind of a feeling There's a stirring down at Vincennes Zoo And the kid down the hall's getting restless Taking stairs like a young kangaroo Now the dandy is walking his poodle And the concierge sunning her cat But the heart's with the Cubs and the Tigers And the sound of the crack of a bat.

Mayberry Is Sent By Royals to Jays By Dick Roraback

berry, who three years ago signed SI- million contract with the Kansas City Royals, was traded to Toronto yesterday for an unnamed minor leaguer.

Joe Burke, Royals general man-ager, said the slump-ridden first baseman, who fell out of grace duriog last year's American League playoffs, did not cost the Blue Jays a player from their major league roster. "We'll have a choice of some of their young players after Oct. 1," Burke said. Hopefully, we'll get ooe of their good prospects in their minor league system.

Manager Whitey Herzog had made oo secret of his wish to trade Mayberry, and the Royals pursued a deal all winter. From the outset of spring training, it was apparent Mayberry had lost his first base job to a rookie, Cliot Hurdle.

A Terrible Game

Mayherry's problems were most evident in last year's fourth playoff game against the New York Yankees, when the normally slick-fielding first haseman dropped a pop foul and fumbled a throw to the bag. Before being benched, he struck out twice with men in scoring position.

The Yankees won the game to square the best-of-five series at 2-2, and the following day woo the pennant. Mayberry later said he had been suffering from a toothache.

"Mayberry wasn't ready to play in that fourth game," Herzog said yesterday, "and that was the most important game in Royals'

South Korea Looks for Its Buried Past

By William Chapman

SEOUL. (WP)—South Korea is in the midst of a vast undertaking to recover its lost past, a sweeping search for roots which intrudes into almost every corner of its culture.

Part of this renewed interest in such areas as history, literature, arts and religioo is spontaneous, but much of it is generated by Presideot Park Chung Hee and his zealous ministers. Whatever its impetus, much of it is a reaction to some 70 years of foreign domination and directioo.

It has been only since the beginning of this decade that economic conditions in Korea have made it possible to reach back to the past in store it and to preserve it.

This revival is implictly anti-Western, perhaps naturally so as the United States prepares to pull out its troops and tell Koreans in a number of ways they must prepare to go it alone. There are oo "Yankee go home" posters in Korea, but there is an undercurrent of feeling, encouraged by President Park, that the impact of American culture since World War II has been too strong and that Korean culture should be revived in its Sonu Whi, a prominent author and editor in chief of the daily oewspaper Chosun Ilbo, is by oo means an ultra-nationalist but he is disturbed by the extent to which Western ways have been implanted in his country. "The other day I was talking to my oephews," he said, "and I was surprised to discover they could spell the name of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis but could not spell the name of their own grandfather. Another thing — I recently beard a woman say of some man that he must be an intellectual because be spoke English, as if only those who speak English are intellectuals. Some people think that beefsteak is always better than bulgogi (a Korean beef dish). These things come out of too much Westernization. We have to find our own things."

Many Korean intellectuals are torn between their acknowledged reliance on Americans for defense and their resentment at being what one called "overmanaged" hy American officials. Americans are forever advising them to exercise their sovereignty-until it interferes with American interests. They cite instances in which the United States has restrained their search for ouclear energy technology and prevented imports of some advanced computers. More recently, the Tongsun Park affair bas enraged some who feel the American demand that he he surrendered for testimooy was high-handed. When Park was required to sign an agreement in the U.S. Embassy here, ooe angry professor sat down to write an essay comparing it to the extraterritorial rights claimed by the past colonizers of Asia. He decided not to publish it for fear of inciting his students.

Such incidents are cited with displeasure by Hahm. Byung Choon, an articulate scholar who once was ambassador to the United Staes. The American reluctance to permit ouclear development, he believes, is a reflection of the West's assumed moral superiority, a conviction that Asians aren't to be trusted. The Western industrial countries not only have the technology but they have the nuclear weapons—for peace' they always say." Hahm said with an edge of cootempt in his voice. "There is a kind of moral uprightness that they have the will not to use them and that we are evil and might oot resist the temptation to use them. There's no way to rebut this, it's so strong. They just shrug their shoulders and say, 'Well, that's the way it is with a mad bunch of dictators running around the ... The United States has felt it could manage Korean affairs in ways it did not apply to other countries."

It is impossible to tell how deeply these sentiments are felt hy hy the average Korean. But there is evidence of a rising rejection of dependence on foreigners. It is contained in a widely discussed poll taken last fall by the Public Administra-tion Research Institute of Seoul National University. A representative sample of Koreans were asked if they thought it right that Koreans should have strong feelings of dependence on foreign countries. Seventy-six percent answered in the negative, an increase of about 20 percentage points since a similar poll the year before.

For most of this century, the Koreans haven't had an identity to call their own. During the 36-year occupation that ended in 1945, the Japanese virtually pulled the country's culture out by the roots. The schools were run by Japanese teachers and only the Japanese language was permitted in classrooms and in official public affairs. Family names were changed from Korean to Japanese. Children were required to bow each day to the East, toward the emperor of Japan, and were hauled frequently to Shinto shrines to worship Japanese gods. "We were being remade into Japanese, recalls one middle-aged Korean who grew up io those years.

The occupation by Japan was followed by civil chaos, the Korean war of 1950-53, a decade of improverishment and thousands of American troops with their chewing gum, jazz and slang. Koreans oever got a chance in look back oo their own traditioos uotil the early 1970s when their economy suddenly began to prosper.

For one thing, they stopped a systematic looting of their antiques and pottery, which foreigners were shipping out of the country at bargain prices. As former Ambassador Hahm puts it, "We began to have higger houses with bigger rooms to display the antiques which formerly had to be sold to buy bowls of rice."

When President Park seized on those beginnings to make "revitalization" a national crusade, some Korcans felt he emhraced the revival with such fervor because it suited his politics to wrap himself in history. Emphasizing the native ways dimioished the influence of the foreign ooes.

One dissident who already has served time in prison for criticizing the President said. There is a genuine kind of cultural nationalism and it is a good thing. Vietnam Veteran Sells PEOPLE: 'War Games' T-Shirts

In Cadillac, Mich., Vietnam vetran Joe Thompson isn't stuck with 33 dozen T-shirts anymore. The shirts that Thompson is selling carry the slogan: "Participant, Southeast Asia War Games, 1961-1975, second place." Thompson wasn't able to unload many of the shirts until news stories began circuloting about the problems he was having placing advertise-ments for them. Now, Thompson asid, people ranging from veter-ans to prison inmates are calling or writing for the shirts, and he has sold 31 dozen so far. "If I had to pay to advertise in all those newspapers, it would have cost me $10,000," said Thompson, who runs a small curio shop and is partially disabled.

President Carter called one of John Wayne's sons to praise the 70-year-old actor as a great na-tional asset and said be was praying for Wayne's recovery from heart surgery, a hospital spokes-man said. Wayne was operated on to replace a faulty heart valve. Michael said he went to his father's room after the call. "I told my father, and be smiled," Michael said. "He mouthed, 'Great'." Doctors said that they told Wayne that he has a 90-percent chance of surviving the operation and resuming his career.

Follow-up: Sen James Allen of Alahama said that he was suspending a staff aide who sent several people letters calling them "crackpots" for objecting to Allen's opposition to the Panama Canal treaties. Charles Mitchell, Allen's executive secretary, sent the letters under Allen's signature even though Allen had not read them. Io ooe letter he told a Massachusetts woman that her state was "a melting pot for neurotics, cranks and other individuals with subnormal meotalities." Allen said that "I have, sadly, suspended Mitchell from my staff for a period of 60 days. It was inappropriate for these letters to be written, signed and sent out by Mr. Mitchell."

cayne. But Nixon and his wife, FBPat, flew into Miami aboard a scheduled flight and only a handful of crew members and airport maintenance men witnessed their arrival. The Nixons transferred to waiting seaplane that took them a waiting seapiane that took them to Walker Cay, near the private island home, on Grand Cay in the Bahamas, of Nixon's old friend, Robert Abplanalp. They were greeted by Abplanalp and another Nixon family friend, the banker Charles (Bebe) Rebozo. The purpose of the reunion was to celebrate Abplanalp's 56th birth-

British newspapers are huzzing with reports that Queen Elizabeth has ordered Princess Margaret to give up hrewery heir Roddy Llewellyn or withdraw from public life. The Queen is said to be distressed that the relationship with Llewellyn, who is 17 years younger than Margaret, is damaging the royal image. The 47year-old princess has been in seclusion and is officially reported ill with influenza.
